BECOMING A SOLDIER STARTS WITH TRAINING

Your transformation from civilian to Soldier takes place alongside other young men and women who are taking control of their futures. Like them, you are probably seeking a challenge and the opportunity to become a stronger, more confident person.

BASIC TRAINING

During these 10 weeks, you will become physically and mentally stronger – learning to overcome the challenges placed before you. Basic Training instructors teach new Soldiers how to care for themselves and others, to function as a member of a team and to achieve success together. They will provide you with the confidence to succeed in the face of adversity.

Training includes first aid, marksmanship, tactics and other related topics. You will also learn about the customs, traditions and values that all Soldiers live by.

ADVANCED INDIVIDUAL TRAINING

After you complete Basic Training, you are ready to attend Advanced Individual Training (AIT) to learn the skills required to perform your military job. At one of the many schools run by the Army, you will receive hands-on training and field instruction to make you an expert in the career field (Military Occupational Specialty or MOS) that you chose at the time of your enlistment.

The Army National Guard provides real-world training in over 200 exciting career fields that will prepare you to work together with other units and organizations to complete any mission.

You will develop the leadership and technical skills that will make you a valuable asset to civilian employers and give you an edge in today's highly competitive job market.

USE YOUR EDUCATION & SKILLS TO BE A LEADER

The Army National Guard's success depends on great Soldiers at every level and Soldiers reach their potential under the leadership of great officers. Officers in the Army National Guard are decision makers and difference makers. They hold positions of tremendous authority and responsibility for their country, their troops and themselves.

GET AN EDGE ON THE JOB MARKET

Whether it's a job in the medical field, communications, infantry or working with other Soldiers in combat teams, you'll develop the skills needed to succeed in your military career while enhancing your employability as a civilian. You will gain the discipline and work ethic to help you, no matter what path you take in life. Additionally, you may be able to earn college credit for Army National Guard education and training.
